Headmistress's Message

Mrs. Eve Marshall

Congratulations to the graduates of 1990, our 75th Anniversary graduates. We are justly proud of the group of 22 young women whose Yearbook this is and wish them well as they face the challenges of the years ahead.

Every graduating class is special and has its own character. Nonetheless, as we celebrated our anniversary in the spring, with our parties and conference and displays, we felt a great sense of the continuity of the stream of students who have attended The Study. Each student is a part of the continuum which does not begin or end with any one year, but which supports every student, carries her along, and ultimately releases her, well-prepared, into the mainstream of life. From Miss Gascoigne and the first six girls she tutored in her study, through to the graduates of 1990, the girls who have worn the Study uniform and have absorbed the Study's values, have been changed by their experience at The Study and carry something of the culture of the school for the rest of their lives.

The sense of the continuity of history applies as much to the school as to the students. We contemplate the possibility of a new building with a sense of nostalgia; we shall miss the old houses on Braeside Place, just as those earlier students and teachers missed the old house on Seaforth. But we know that it is not the bricks and mortar that make the school. The soul of the school is something above and beyond the physical surroundings, and whatever The Study looks like, and wherever it is, it will still be The Study. It will still sustain and nurture its students in the highest academic, social and moral traditions. And it will always welcome its graduates in the warmest possible way. Especially the class of 1990, to whom we again say, "Congratulations, best wishes, and Goodspeed".

I've evolved quite a lot in this school. From being known as the "American" to just being known. I have so many people to thank. I guess it's best to start from the beginning. Thanks to Sarah, my big sister in a small school. You made it seem a lot smaller. The memories I have are some of the best ones of my life. Simon & Garfunkel: "preserve your memories, that's all that's left for you." Kelly - Migrane Mates; Stratford; Emily -"Let's go shopping" in the SHS yearbook; La Ronde- I've never been whiter; Satanic Vermont- The ERA nuns, the Socialist mayor, the sexual preferences of 70% of the population; the efficiency of the police force in the elimination of "grass" from the fields by burning it; and the consequent halt of traffic due to the "free ride" they could get from the side of the road. To my mother- I will always want to abolish all car horns due to all of the times she used it to embarrass me. Whenever I want to go out in public with her, I never want to go again. I have to hand it to her, wherever she goes, she always leaves people laughing; "There are some souls in this world which have the gift of ... leaving (joy) behind them when they leave." Mimi, Andrea, and Jenn friends forever. And as for the present- only the future contained in a moment. As for the future- You can't be too hopeful; you can't be to doubtful; I suppose all you have to be is there.

Dedicated to the Class of '90-

Thinking of You

I'm thinking of you, again. I do it often. Mostly when I've been hurt inside, but sometimes when I'm having the most fun. Wishing you were here or wishing I were there. Wishing anything that would mean we'd still be together. It seems so unreal, so strange that you can't just dash over to my house to talk, or to get help with my homework or just to have a good laugh. Maybe over your diary, or those silly things we taped on your tape recorder. It's funny that you always turn up in my best memories and there are many. Like the time we were the only kids at the slumber party who stayed awake (with the help of sheer will power) until 5 a.m., with secret silent trips to the kitchen, groping our way to the leftover watermelon or fixing some hot cocoa that never did turn out right. And those crazy dances we tried to do. I'm thinking of the many serious discussions we had on life and death, which sooner or later would turn into heated arguments. We two, were the ones labeled "Nutty" by the other, more practical kids. We two, were the ones who "forgot" to do their homework. We two, were the ones who stayed late after school discussing capital punishment with the teachers. I'm thinking that through thick and thin, you were there. Sometimes criticizing, often praising, you were there. I'm thinking too, of those times when I resented some of your strange ideas, your many serious thoughts and problems. Even such irrelevant things as the way you run, or laugh. I"m thinking of those times when I didn't defend you when others gossiped about you, maybe even thoughtlessly adding my own, biting remark. I'm thinking of those times when I took your presence so much for granted. Never realizing that sometime you wouldn't be there, ready to smile, ready to forgive. Now, you're far away I don't see you very often anymore. And when I do, I feel we're not quite as close as we used to be. Oh, we still laugh, and horse around when we're together almost like nothing's changed. But not quite. Somewhere, in the back of my mind, is that feeling that we're just pretending we're not in two different worlds; that we are desperately trying to hold on to something; something that is slipping away, slowly. And I pray, and hope, we won't let it. I'm crying now for you my friend the dearest, most precious thing in my life. And I'm thinking of you. Again.

In this our 75th Anniversary year, we though about being a Study girl. We are proud of our school. Our teachers are proud of us .....

Marlene: You have to work hard but you learn a lot of things. We learn to share with others- that is important.
Kim: I like the field trips. We see many things and we learn about vegetables, plants and animals.
Holly: The Study is like home to me- my aunt was here. It's one of the best schools to learn in.
Patricia: The big girls give us parties at Halloween and Christmas. Sometimes they visit us.
Tamar: I love learning how to do mathematics- difficult sums like 407-89. You have to borrow from the next place.
Bonnie: I like everyone in the Study because I think it's the best place to be.
Nathalie J.: I like the work sheets- they are fun to do. I adore reading.
Kristin: It's fun to play outside- I especially like the tire. I like to work.
Kimberly: I am proud to wear the Study uniform. Our days are busy.
Elizabeth: I like the teachers and other girls. I love the art class and working on computers.
Anuska: I like being a Study girl. I get to do reading homework.
Tamara: I like being a Study girl- it is a special feeling. It is a place to learn.
Nathalie N.: We learn to be nice to one another. I like to do spelling.
Julia: Script writing is fun. The teachers are the best.
Shannon: The Study is the best school. I feel happy and cheerful just being here.
Marie-Eve: I like gym. When we do mathematics I feel good. I like visiting the library and reading.
Anya: The teachers are great. We learn Language Arts.
Lily: My cousin was here and I belong here. I like my teachers and I've made lots of friends.
Janice: I like reading and gym. I enjoy going outside to play.

Grade 1A's special, rousing, spirit elevating Study cheer ----

Hurray for The Study
IT'S THE BEST
Hurray for The Study
We're better than the rest.
Hurray for us.
We pass every test.

Stephanie: Having milk at breaktime.
Cora: The nature around the school, especially the trees and squirrels.
Alana: Learning.
Bo-Yee: Giving Mrs. Lincoln a hug and a kiss.
Dana: Singing with Mademoiselle LeDez.
Jenny: My friends in Kindergarten.
Christine: Going to the big gym and playing "What Time is it, Mr. Wolf?".
Melissa: Playing on our computers.
Karen O'Keefe: Being Mrs. Lincoln's partner down to lunch.
Jessica P.: Sending notes to all the teachers in the school.
Anja: I like doing homework.
Jessica S.: Doing things that have a point to experience.
Mrs. Lincoln: Kindergarten!

The Junior School kids have tons of spirit. They are all great. We had a lot of fun at the Junior School Halloween party. We played games, had a costume contest, a makeup booth and lots of ice cream. Each time we went up to the Junior School assemblies they were very quiet and listened to us very carefully. They always brought in collection and enjoyed seeing George when he came up for a visit. I want to thank Steph, my always enthusiastic assistant and of course all the kids in the Junior School. We will miss you all. Luv Stephanie Canci and Stephanie Silverman

This year, we had an amazing start leaving the other houses in our dust in Lawn to Lawn. Thanks to everyone for pulling together and being so spirited this year! Our plan is to continue winning in all house events, not only this year but in all the years to come. Good luck to next year's house officials.

Okay, you guys, whoever has excellents ... Look El, one of our incredible Kappa Rhoians raked in 1002 excellents. Way to go! Hey Em, 2011 house points and NO demerits. We're so proud of you guys!

As the house meeting continues we, the house heads, feel the mounting pressure put upon us by the bunch. Inside each one of them there is a bursting desire to cheer (using one of our millions of new cheers).

Alright, we've collected 20643 points, that's amazing! Eh, El? Ya, but we need to and can do better.

Don't forget guys, we want to go up on stage at the end of the year ...

What do the words spirited, enthusiastic, talented, bright ... and beautiful all have in common? There is no question that these are all characteristics of Mugamma girls. They are all smart and athletic, and although it is still early in the year, we're already well on the way to the top! It is not hard to remember the Mugamma motto because, after all, Mugamma is the BEST!! We are never worried about our future success as a house, because traditionally we always do well, and we of course are confident that this year will be no different. Way to go Mugamma, keep it up! Good luck to next year's house officials, it's always great to lead the best house in the school, MG!! Luv always,

The resolution before the house today is, be it resolved that: The Debate Club was successful in the 1989-90 years.

Madame Speaker, there is no question that with the enthusiasm and talent of the girls in the Study Debate Club, that this bill must stand. They are all hardworking students that strive to do their best and through their preparations and participation they have all been assets to the club. Each debater added her own special flavour to the group and the outcome could only be one of success.

This can be proven in a matter of ways. Firstly, in-school debates were always of high quality, and they always gave maximum effort. As well, when the girls were put to the ultimate test in tournaments, it was no surprise to hear how well they did.

Therefore Madame Speaker, my colleague and I feel that this bill must stand because of the reasons which we have stated which prove beyond any doubt that the The Study Debating Club was an enormous success in 1989-90!

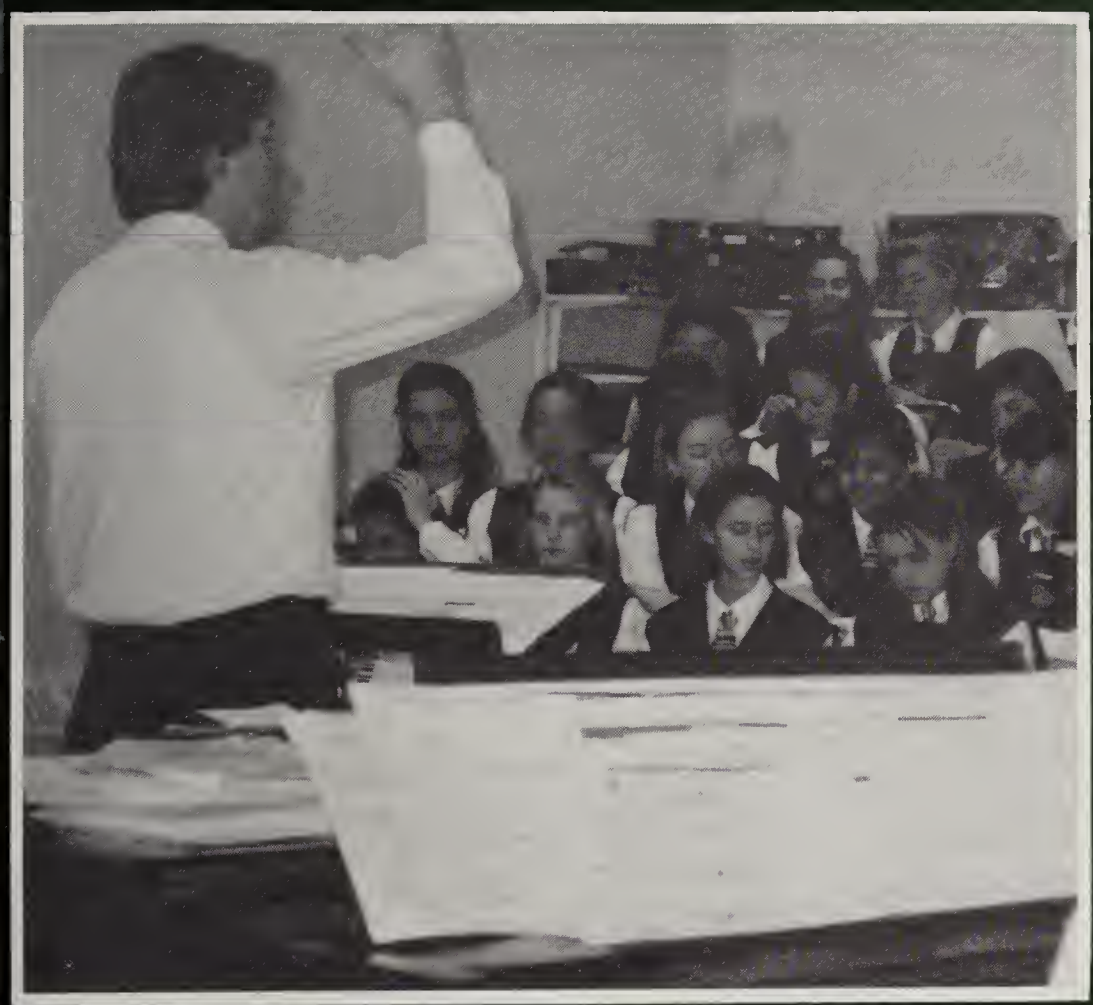
Luv,
Jordana & Paulina

Agents for the Stars

Lara Rabia & Jennifer White

Advertising is probably one of the most challenging jobs because it means reaching the public and selling them on your ideas. This year the sixth form introduced a new committee to help publicize all the various school functions and two very capable individuals were placed in charge. Lara Rabia and Jennifer White successfully accomplished the task at hand and helped to get everyone to attend The Study's exciting events. THANKS A LOT!!!

The Sound of Music



This year The Study and Trillium choirs have once again outdone themselves under the expert direction of Mr. Christiani and skilled piano playing of Ron. They rang in the new decade with another successful Christmas concert, and delighted a few Friday morning assemblies with their songs. The Choir also completed a tape in honour of the 75th anniversary, and continued to distinguish themselves as they are so known to do. They always seem to hit just the right notes!

The Big Picture

Art this year has been really inspirational. In addition to the normal weekly classes, an extra period of art has been added to the schedule during Clubs. The students are given the opportunity to create their own masterpieces using any medium they desire under Mrs. Milligan's watchful eye. At her second year at The Study, Mrs. M has quickly become the favorite teacher of many of the students and without her expertise, Art Club would never have come into existence.

We are all a bit crazy, but the trouble is persuading people that they really are, and trying to help them discover it in themselves. After all, it is a lot more fun to be "wild and crazy." This task of persuasion is what enthusiasm is all about. No two people are more qualified to lead this campaign than Katie and Mimi because they LOOK perfectly sane but when you see two people who are supposed to be rational come dancing into the Bazaar dressed up as Mickey and Donald (CEOs' of the Disney Corporation), it's a dead giveaway that they're lunatics. But everyone loved it, especially the little kids. (They are the biggest advocates of insanity.) On the other side of the coin, Katie and Mimi are very responsible and mature as they should be. But in a world where everyone is allegedly mature and responsible, it is the lunatics who save the day. Thank you Katie and Mimi for saving our day.

All the President's Men

To be able to work successfully and efficiently with other people with the view of reaching a decision that might please all is a task that few can accomplish. In working with a group, a multitude of things have to be taken into consideration. Thus an organized, independent and enthusiastic group is needed. 1989's Student Council, consisting of: Emily Beckerleg, Mebrat Beyene, Katie Davidman, Kate Gordon, Andrea Molnar, and Jordana Sanft were put to the task and have proved that this group certainly worked very well together. However, it was more of a pleasure than a task. 1989 has been the year of change and in all corners of the world this wave was felt. Even at The Study School six members of the Student Council sought to bring to the school a bit of a variation in all that was done. Hopefully, this was felt throughout the school and more or less appreciated. A great round of applause is deserved to Mrs. Ewing, Dr. Cooke, and Mrs. Marshall who brought us down to reality, kept us level-headed and in control ... sort of!

Food, Glorious Food

Jay-Jay Roboz & Lori Seidman

This year, tuck was held every Tuesday and Thursday. We had a large assortment of high calorie food to fill hungry people's mouths. They bombarded us with their money, throwing loonies at us even in the hallway. We hope to make a lot of money for our graduation, to make it the best ever. Good luck to next year's tuck committee, what an honor!

As this past year has been the marking of the school's 75th anniversary, "Sharing the Challenge of the 21st Century" was held in April. This was done to celebrate and appreciate progression through ages past and present, as we face the ultimate challenge; the future. Planning such a conference is not an easy job. The Secondary IV's and V's were divided into committees, each led by a steering committee representative, a staff member, and usually a Study parent to discuss the who's, what's, where's and when's of the conference. Meetings were held each month, headed by Mrs. Marshall and an atmosphere of anticipation and involvement was felt in the student body as everybody had a responsibility to fulfill in the organization of the biggest event held at The Study to date.

All Booked Up

Knowledge is the root of wisdom. Self-taught wisdom gives an individual the sense of accomplishment and self-worth. In the library, surrounded by knowledge, we can find the best learning environment. Resources at your fingertips and a quiet, concentrated setting aid in the learning process. This year's library committee, headed by Mary Wood, was in charge of maintaining this studious atmosphere. The library committee, consisting of Pauline Hubert, Andrea Molnar, Mebrat Beyene, Natalie Molson, and Lara Rabia were instrumental in the regulation of the Library's books, atmosphere and order. Whether we were successful or not remains to be answered however. We thank the volunteer mothers who came every week and somehow controlled the large masses of overdue books. Special thanks to Mrs. Vivian, for all her time, patience and knowledge. We hope The Study library will grow with the students' knowledge through the years.

The Color of Money

Pauline Hubert & Stephanie Canci

We as human beings, are caretakers of the world in which we live. We are responsible for its people and its environment. Somewhere along the lines we have let our duties falter and too many of our people are downtrodden and our world is dying. At this point it is wise to try and alleviate our problems by giving money to organizations who donate their time to better our world and give hope to those who need it most.

Pauline Hubert and Stephanie Canci have worked relentlessly throughout the year to see that just this happens. Ensuring that the money donated by the students of The Study is well directed to charities that reflect our concerns for a better world. For it is YOUR hope that is the initiative for change.

We THANK PAULINE & STEPHANIE So Much!

That's Entertainment!

Lynn Grunberg & Lisa Pascal

We had a terrific year on the Entertainment Committee. The 7-8 Ghost's Gala dance was a huge success. The Cotillion was a lot of fun to organize and it turned out to be terrific. At the Christmas dinner everyone had a blast. We hope to have a 9-11 dance later on in the year and we're sure that it will be a lot of fun as well. Good luck to next year's Entertainment Committee and we hope you have as much fun and success as we did.

We are all very excited about this year's graduation. So far we have had some very successful fund raisers. We had a great car wash, sold poinsettias, as well as keeping the students full with our weekly Tuck.

We hope to raise enough funds to cover the biggest party in the history of modern man. Thank you for your support.

Talent Shines Among Study Stars

Opportunities for Study girls to widen their interests have increased considerably this year. Every Tuesday afternoon all senior students participate in a Club of their choice. Those girls with an artistic bent work at beautiful Handicrafts, Pottery and other forms of Art. Creative writing and art combine in the Newspaper editions and Travel brochures. Debate develops the persuasive public speaking skills of its members, while Classics and Drama clubs guide their participants through a different expressive experience. Current Events help us to be informed. Budding researchers gather in the Science labs. Computer skills are further developed by others. Lovely sounds can be heard from the Music group. Aerobics and Jogging are welcome contrasts to the mental exertion which dominates a Study girl's day. Community Service at The Queen Elizabeth Hospital, Julius Richardson Convalescent Centre, Mackay Centre, and The Royal Victoria Hospital give students an opportunity to assist and encourage those who are less fortunate than we are. The experiment appears to be successful. In the future we expect there to be refinement of what is now in place and expansion of variety as new interests and talents are discovered in both the staff and the students, who share in the new, added, vitality at The Study.

The producers of the 1990 yearbook are hoping to end the decade with a blockbuster hit. We tried to incorporate a Hollywood theme throughout these pages of magic moments and hope that you will enjoy this new addition. However every director needs some valuable assistants, and I have certainly been in abundance of those. A terrific layout staff, photographers always snapping star quality shots, advertisers who sell as good as agents and section helpers and typists are the outstanding cast members that make up this year's production. Other essential people cannot go unnoticed for without them, there would be no Study Trillium; Chanoy, the best sub-editor anyone could ever ask for and Carrie, whose contributions and interest were really appreciated; Frau Sutherland, who runs the tightest ship in the business and Steven Barber who is an editor's miracle. Good Luck to the staff in next year's spotlight.

The bantam basketball team had a fun season. Although, we were not successful (only winning one game) we learned a lot. The bantam team hosted the annual Private School Basketball Invitational Tournament. We give much thanks to Mrs. Balfour for not giving up on us when we, at times trailed behind 16-0. I wish much luck to next year's team, and I hope you'll be more successful than we were.

Although we did not win the season, we definitely improved and learned as the season progressed. It was a young team, for many it had been there first year in the juvenile league. I know for one thing we had a great time! As every year we participated in the basketball tournament which we did not win either but we got a chance to see some winning teams!!!! I hope next year you guys have some better luck and as great a time! We ended up the season with what is becoming a traditional game against Selwyn House, we sort of lost it though! We would like to thank our faithful followers, timer, scorekeeper and to Mr. Mac for his much improved vocal control. Thanks for a great season and good luck next year!!! (I'm expecting a better record).

Smash Hits

The badminton season started right after basketball with tournaments against Traf, E.C.S., Sacred Heart, Centennial and Villa Maria. On the whole the bantam, the midget and the juvenile teams did very well. Special congratulations to juvenile doubles team Melina Nacos and Lucie Opatrny, as well as juvenile singles Sarah Bolton who was undefeated all season. Thanks to all the subs who came through for the team at the last minute, we really appreciated it. A special thanks to Mrs. Wright.

The cross-country team this year worked really hard. Enthusiastic to improve ourselves and train to win, we met regularly during the week. Madame Jothy was essential to the team and we would like to extend our most sincere thanks. Her support in both the physical aspect of training and in mental preparation was absolutely necessary and much appreciated. As well, we would like to thank Mrs. Balfour without whom, there would be no team. She was supportive as always and her encouragement and training never failed us.

An outstanding performance was given by Regina Flores who placed 5th overall in the G.M.A.A. cross-country regional meet with over 90 competitors. Claudine Molson and Alexandra Rourke also placed in the top 20%.

All the participants deserve to be congratulated for they all did very well and most importantly, we all had a great time.

Good luck to next year's team, remember, it's just a walk in the park!

The Bantam Volleyball team has had the most AMAZING year. We've had the most co-operative team, and the BEST coach ever. Doing much better than we did last year, we won 1 1/2 out of 3 tournaments. The first volleyball practice of the season with our new coach not only shocked our minds but our muscles. This coach, Will Taylor, pushed us into shape in a matter of two weeks, and kept on pushing us on a regular basis until our victory at the end of the season in the Early Bird Tournament at John Abbot College in December. In our regular season of G.M.A.A. competition we played into the quarterfinals when we were just eliminated in the third game of the match. We all thoroughly enjoyed this season and we sincerely hope that Will comes back next year to coach us as Juvenile players.

The SOCCER season this fine year was filled with many great moments. Both the Bantams and Juveniles tried hard, (as always) and with the consistent and never-ending help and support of our coaches. A very special and warm thanks are in order for Mrs. Balfour and Fiona Wright for without them, we would not have managed. Even though the 7:00 am practices were dreadful we always had a great time and managed to remain spirited. If there is one thing that the Study soccer team can do and do well, it is to show encouragement and support of one another. Don't worry guys we looked great out there!

Good luck to all of you next year we hope you have as much fun as we did! Thanks to all supporters who came out and watched us. We really appreciated it.

Sports Captain - Magic Bolton

This year the girls playing on the teams really enjoyed themselves. Whether it was during the soccer tournament at Stanstead, their practices early in the morning, the basketball tournament in Montreal, the volleyball tournaments or the basketball against S.H.S., the girls participated in as much as they could and played as well as they could play showing lots of effort and love for the sport they were playing. It really is not important whether you win or lose but what is important is that you enjoy the sport you are playing and get the most out of it. Joining team sports is a commitment that everybody has to take seriously in order to accomplish and excel in a sport. So far the year in sports has been great and it looks as though the end could be very promising in badminton, tennis and track and field. Remember it's not important if you win or lose (or what the score is) but it is important to try as hard as you can and to especially enjoy it. Remember if you cannot have fun then it is not worth it!!!

GOOD LUCK NEXT YEAR!!!!!

Lawn to Lawn

BL Mows the Competition

The Lawn to Lawn was held on Thursday, October 5, 1989, in which everybody from grade 4 on participated including the teachers. It started off in the junior school basement through the middle school, passed in the gym, the lunchroom and parts were held outside. It seems as though it was really enjoyed by everyone and I hope that you are all excited and ready for it again next year. The reason the lawn to lawn was such a great success was because of all the help and contribution given by gr. 11 and the teachers. A special thanks to the four sports captains of the houses who contributed a lot of their time for a great event.

The Parrot Jungle

When me and my family went to the parrot jungle, we saw the snake show. There were many snakes and crocodiles, and some of the snakes went around the man's arm. I also saw one iguana, and the man gave it some lettuce. After that my sister and I went to feed the parrots. We saw flamingos, two tortoises and a beautiful white peacock. Then we went to the pet zoo. I fed baby goats after we all had popsicles. We also saw the parrot show. One was singing, one was talking, and one was playing cards. We had lots of fun in the parrot jungle and it was the BEST.

The Princess and her Wedding

One morning a king was complaining to his wife about their daughter. She was turning twenty in two weeks and she had no boyfriend. Her father said that she had to get married when she was twenty. The princess was still sleeping in her room, so she did not hear what he said. When she woke up and went downstairs, she heard the king complaining. She heard the king say that she is almost twenty and that she is not engaged to a boy yet. Then he stopped, he turned his head, and saw the princess at the door. She said, "I heard what you said and it is true, but I will find a prince to marry. He has to be handsome." Suddenly there was a knock on the door. The king said, "I will get the door". He opened the door and he saw a prince. The king let him in and when the princess saw him, she fell in love with him and he fell in love with her. The king knew they loved each other, so the prince and the princess got married and lived happily ever after. When the king and queen died, they became king and queen.

LE COURS DE FRANÇAIS

Dès le début du cours de Francais,
Nous préparons nos livres et nos cahiers,
Puis nous bavardons quelque temps
Au sujet des garçons-qui sort avec Jean?
C'est alors que vous apparaissez,
En vous excusant, car vous aviez oublié
Qu'on avait classe. Le cours est amusant,
Shawna et Lesley rigolent dans le dernier rang
Soudain vous annoncez une dictée,
Puis encore - NON PREPARÉE!
Nous protestons, mais tout en vain,
Pas possible de la remettre à demain.
Quand je chuchote à Caroline en anglais (jamais)
Vous dites: "Pour demain, tu me fais ...."
Je devine tout de suite-UNE COMPOSITION!
Zut! Pourvu que ça ne soit pas trop long.
Il y a de longues leçons,
Des travaux et des punitions.
Par contre on sort des fois,
Pour souper, et aller au cinéma
Vous êtes gentille, et nous vous aimons bien,
Et vous souhaitons une JOYEUSE ST-VALENTIN!

LE PLAISIR DES MOTS

Je suis en train d'écrire une composition pour mes professeurs de français. J'ai décidé de parler du "plaisir des mots", mais j'ai un énorme problème: je n'ai aucune idée de ce que je peux écrire. Sans mentir, je n'aime pas beaucoup faire mes devoirs, et, surtout, écrire des compositions. Je n'ai pas d'imagination, et il me faut beaucoup de temps (et beaucoup de papier) avant de pouvoir, au moins, d'inspiration pour écrire quelque chose qui est loin d'être un chef-d'oeuvre.

J'envie les personnes qui ont une telle facilité pour écrire qu'elles le font pour s'amuser; cette magie que contiennent les mots pour quelques personnes les aide à remplir des milliers de pages avec des verbes, des adjectifs, des noms, et des prépositions. J'admire ces personnes. Et moi, je suis en train de me plaindre parce que je ne peux pas remplir trois pages de composition.

Mon dieu! Déjà quatre heures se sont écoulées, et je n'ai rien écrit au sujet du plaisir des mots! Ça veut dire que je finirai cette composition dans ... approximativement ... HUIT HEURES?!! Je dois rester calme ... je ne peux pas paniquer ... je devrais invoquer les muses de l'inspiration.

Hmmm ... que pourrais-je dire au sujet du plaisir des mots? Je déteste écrire, je ne pourrai jamais comprendre le plaisir que les écrivains trouvent lorsqu'ils expriment leurs sentiments sur un morceau de papier.

Pour les gens qui aiment écrire, les mots ont une beauté innée; les grands écrivains peuvent peindre des tableaux infinis, riches en détails et couleurs, mais qui changent selon l'imagination de chaque personne qui les lit.

Alors, pourquoi les mots donnent-ils cet immense plaisir aux écrivains et aux lecteurs? Se pourrait-il qu'ils aient raison? Peut-être si j'étais un peu plus optimiste, au lieu de gaspiller quatre heures à me plaindre, je pourrais écrire une composition. Ça me semble être une bonne idée! Alors je commence dès maintenant à écrire ma composition:

Ahem! ... Mais? C'est trop tard! Je l'ai déjà finie! Peut-être qu'écrire n'est pas aussi terrible que je le pensais ... Peut-être que je me suis amusée lorsque j'écrivais cette composition ... et, vous savez, peut-être que j'ai déjà découvert le plaisir que contiennent les mots.

My Life as a Mother

One morning I was awakened by my alarm, and I woke up the three kids. The dog jumped on my daughter's bed; my eldest daughter locked the door so she could do all her necessary things. I went downstairs and said, "Oh No! I forgot to make the lunches." I looked in the bread drawer and I didn't have any bread, so I gave them each a packet of cheese and crackers. Then I looked in the fridge and I didn't have any juice, so I gave them a bottle of water. When they came downstairs, I drove them to school and on my way, I ran out of gas, so I said to one of my daughters, "You drive and I will push." Once we got to the gas station and got gas we were able to get to school.

I got back home and there in the kitchen there was a big mess on the floor. I shouted to the dog, "Three bags of garbage!!!!" After I had cleaned up the telephone rang.

"It's the man who interviewed you for an office manager," he said. "I accepted you because I think you are very well organized."

"Are you kidding? My husband divorced me because I wasn't organized. I'm sorry but I can't do the job. I am too busy at home."

I went to the store and bought all the things that I needed for dinner. When I went to the cash the bill was $150.00. I looked into my purse and I had forgotten my wallet. While I was putting everything back on the shelves everything fell down. By that time I had had enough, so I left and went to pick up my kids. After I had picked up two of them I waited outside the third school for one and one half hours. Finally, my eldest daughter came out and I said, "I've been waiting since 3:00 o'clock for you." My daughter said, "Don't you remember? I told you that I had basketball practice and to pick me up at 4:30."

"Oh, I forgot. I had such a hard day that I just forgot. Next time you get out late, take the bus or walk home because I have had enough. Get into the car."

All of a sudden I was awakened by my mother. I said, "I'm glad that was only a dream because I couldn't handle being a mother and I'm glad I'm only 10 years old."

No One's Land

A small calm breeze,
The sound of trees,
When battles cease,
The silent pain.

The smallest things can make you wonder,
If, at the sound of thunder,
You can be taken to a place
Where there is no human race.

Flowers grow
In harmony,
Colours sparkle,
Thoughts are free

And love,
The only feeling there,
Is felt throughout
And everywhere.

When,
The land is dry and hot,
The bloody battle still is fought,
The pain is spoken loud and clear,
It echoes out in every ear ...

I'll long for the touch of hand and wait for you in No One's Land.

Deep in the Forest I Discovered a Secret

One wintry Saturday morning, I decided to take my dogs for a walk in the woods. I am a twelve year old animal lover with two dogs, Rufus and Simon, and two cats, Lucy and Belle. My usual path through the woods did not appeal to me so I opted for a new route. This path was very beautiful. All the sparkling snow was weighing the branches down and crunching under my boots as I walked along. Simon and Rufus were enjoying it just as much as I was; they were smelling all the little bits of life that were sticking out of the snow and following the animal tracks that crossed our path. We came across a spot where a fox had obviously caught a rabbit for his supper. As it was quite early in the morning there were lots of birds twittering about looking for their breakfast. We continued on until we got to an intersection. I was not sure which way to go, but the dogs seemed determined to follow the scent of something, although no tracks were visible to me. Embedded deeply in my own thoughts, I was quite content to let them lead me. The subject of my daydreams was my boyfriend, or rather I should say, my boyfriend "to be". His name is Chris, and if you ask me, he is the most divine male human on earth. He is thirteen, a year older than me, but that does not matter; age is not a factor in love. I was startled out of my thoughts by Simon, who had let out his high shrill bark that meant something new and exciting was ahead. I ran after the two dogs as they pursued something that I glimpsed as a little flash of green. Now when I say little, I mean about eleven centimeters high, but quite plump. The dogs stopped abruptly at the bottom of a tree whose long exposed roots were strangely gnarled and twisted. As I looked more closely I noticed a very small and mysterious opening between two of the roots, with what seemed to be a door made of moss. While I was looking, the dogs were rapidly moving about, and Rufus bumped into me so that I had to take a very quick step to the right to prevent myself from falling. Just as I did so, I distinctly heard a voice say "Help, get your horrid foot off me". I raised my foot and saw a slightly rumpled little miniature human clad in green, with a four leaf clover on his hat. I realized at once that he must be a leprechaun, and I remembered once reading somewhere that when you see a leprechaun, never to take your eyes off it or else it would disappear. I was careful to observe this precaution. He looked at me with concern and said nervously, "Oh please! Pick me up before these dogs eat me". I quickly picked him up keeping my eyes fixed on him the whole time. As he noticed my staring, he said "Goodness gracious, please don't tell me that you still believe in that old wives' tale". I was surprised when he said this and I looked away immediately. I was glad actually because I was getting quite tired of staring at him non-stop. He said, in his rather Irish accent, "I suppose I should introduce myself. My name is John." Upon learning this I remembered an old school rhyme which I had sung in the playground. It goes like this:

"John, John the leprechaun
Went to school with nothing on.
Teacher said, That's not fair,
Give him back his underwear."

Remembering this I laughed out loud and he said, "What are you laughing about?" I replied "Oh, I was just thinking of some childhood memories that you aroused". John asked me what my name was and when I answered "Star" he said "That name suits you, you remind me of a star". Then he questioned, "Would you like to come in?" "Come in where?" I replied. He said "Why, into the tree trunk of course!" "Oh!" said I, "but I will never be able to fit in there". "Well close your eyes" said he, "until I tell you to open them". I did as he said and when I opened my eyes I found that I had shrunk to his size. I was not quite sure what to say but I decided on "Thank you". He did not reply, so I just followed him through the door. Inside was the most beautiful place I had ever seen. It was just like a doll's house, but much prettier. We entered into what we would consider a main hall, but it was a huge room into which all the leprechauns could fit if there was a huge party, an announcement, a meeting or anything of that sort. As I followed John, I saw that all the roots served as dormitories for the leprechauns. John told me that there were about one hundred leprechauns in this stump, but many more stumps all over the woods. We finally came to the treasure room after going down what seemed like the longest hallway imaginable and then through a maze through which I would never have found my way without John's help. We went into the treasure room and John surprised me by saying I could take any one treasure I wanted. I was spellbound by the treasures of the leprechauns. There was uncountable richness and beauty. They had jewelry, money, pearls, gold, silver and all sorts of other precious stones. I chose a beautiful emerald set in an ornate gold ring. After this I was introduced to the king, a plump little fellow who insisted on organizing a party in my honour. Tables were set out in the great hall and the cooks were bustling about preparing festive foods. Extra candles were being lit and great barrels of beer were being rolled into the hall. Much later that night as I was sinking to sleep in a soft feather guest bed, I knew that I never had, and probably never would, sing, dance and clap so much. My breakfast was waiting for me when I woke up: a huge feast of eggs and bacon, ham and sausages and fresh fruit. I enjoyed it immensely and felt very full when I finished. Now I could understand why all the leprechauns were so plump. If they ate this way all the time, there was no wonder. After experiencing the morning activities of the leprechauns, I was feeling homesick and thought I should be making my way home. After saying good-bye to my many new acquaintances, John walked me to the door where the king was waiting. He told me how welcome I would be to return and visit them any time, and he taught me a special and complicated series of knocks that would be the password for re-entry. After repeating a solemn oath never to disclose the password or the location of the leprechauns' home, I sadly said good-bye to John, stepped through the door, and was at once my normal size again. I realized then, by the dogs' actions, that leprechaun and human time was not comparable, for no time seemed to have elapsed for the dogs while I had been underground. As I started off through the woods, I carried with me the greatest secret I had ever found, and I was sure that I would never tell.

The Greatest Distance We Have Yet to Cover Still Lies Within

If you really think about it, YOU are the most important person in the world. Although you can almost always choose whom you wish to be near or with whom you want to spend time, you will always have to live with yourself. Your very existence is you, and you learn to live with your faults and your qualities, your shortcomings and successes, your happiness and your grief. The ultimate goal in life is to primarily make yourself acceptable to you, as well as to the rest of the world in which you live. Society perceives you as you perceive yourself, and it is up to you, as an individual, to be the best you can possibly achieve.

Both temptation and desire play a strong role in all the phases of man's nature, and mankind is known to be weak in these domains. If you can be strong, and have control over yourself, you can resist these evils, and prove to yourself that you are "the master of your soul".

Frustration tends take the better of a man when he is faced with an obstacle he feels he cannot surmount. Patience is the counterpart of frustration, and is a virtue for which every man should strive. The man that learns to accept the challenges presented by life, and confronts them with determination and zeal, is more learned than the man who stares blindly at the task at hand, incapable because of his own self imposed limitations.

Fear is an enemy that preys on every mortal; fear of new situations, of virgin territory, of anything that is not familiar can lead to withdrawal and eventual isolation. If you can muster up the inner confidence to fight the battles of fear, nothing will stand in your way. Your strength will have a positive impact on all those under your influence, and make them aware of their own strength and capabilities.

One of the best resolutions to live by, is to forgive and forget. Every human being, at one time in his life, has made a mistake. It is part of our nature - for the world would not be as it is if it were not for the mistakes of mankind. It is our duty to forgive our fellow man for his or her mistakes, as it is the duty of others to forgive you. Without this mutual respect, grudges are held, and people's lives are burdened by the relentlessness of the unforgiving. You must also admit to your own wrongs, and act on resolving them, for by deceiving yourself, your fault will not be dissimulated.

Every man is graced with an inborn talent, and your aim throughout life should be to develop that talent to its full potential, and make the best of this gift that is particular to you, and is essential to the full development of your person. Your talent should be your trademark - just as no two pianists can play with the same style or feeling - every man on the face of the earth has his own interpretation of the world around him, and this is what accounts for the great variety of personalities on our planet.

You are the captain of your ship, and it is up to you to guide your vessel through calm or troubled waters, and not let the waves alter your course. Know yourself, and with that knowledge make yourself the best you can be - for every man can be an asset to the world, if he chooses, and with every man that develops his person, there will be a world of difference.

The Web of Life

"Man did not weave the web of life; he is merely a strand on it."
Seattle, Chief of the Duwamish

On the lowest branches of an apple tree, the spider pauses for a moment to contemplate her half-finished masterpiece. The framework holds steadily in the stillness; she returns to her industrious spinning. Slowly, a woven mesh takes shape, meticulously worked with a master's skill. Each strand is delicate on its own, yet joined with others, it gains strength. An early morning breeze sweeps through the orchard, ruffling the leaves. But the spider sits composed on a twig, for she knows her skillfully wrought fabric will stand fast. Indeed, when the squall passes, her handiwork remains intact to catch the first rays of daylight. Seattle, comparing man and his environment to a spider's web, understood life's delicate framework. As a native Indian of North America's western coast, he knew how deeply entwined man's destiny was with his surroundings. His people, the Duwamish of Puget Sound, had lived as fishermen and gatherers for hundreds of years, working with the plants and animals of the region for survival. Their lives taught a lesson that much of the developed world is only now relearning. In all the years of his existence, man has been inter-dependent with his fellow inhabitants of this Earth. Even after the age of industrialization, and the developments in science and technology, he is still dependent on other living beings. He may change his environment, mold it for another purpose, but he will always need it to live. This fact is often forgotten in the rush for profit, in which the economic law of supply and demand overrules a basic law of life. Blue whales, buffalos and passenger pigeons are only a few types of animals who are extinct or endangered through man's selfishness. Once he realized the dangers of overhunting, man did change his ways. Unfortunately, he then began to injure animals indirectly, by directly damaging the environment. The destruction of countless acres of tropical rain forest in South America and the disastrous oil spill of the Exxon Valdez in Alaska are just two of the more striking examples. At last, man seems to have grasped that the suffering of the environment will affect him deeply, for the two are irrevocably linked. However, on occasions man has remembered his link with other living creatures. For instance, salmon have always made their way upstream to spawn and the building of huge hydroelectric dams in the northern rivers disturbed their routes. As they could not pass these manmade barriers, the population declined. Man invented fish ladders, which consist of a series of pools forming a staircase that bypasses the dam, allowing the fish to reach their spawning grounds. By means of this enlightened innovation, man has his electricity and salmon flourish in the rivers. Although man seems eventually to learn from his mistakes, these limitations show that unsupported he could not have woven the web of life. As can be learned on a smaller, more tangible scale from his friend the spider, a master weaver would not permit these problems to occur in the first place. The fabric of life, as originally created, prevented imbalances in the pattern, compensating for unevenness in the strands. That one of the strands has developed a will of its own and pulls the others awry is not the weaver's fault; the artisan can do nothing. It is up to the strands to settle the problem of their own making, and right the situation. Looking at Seattle's assessment of man's role in the world, one realizes its aptness. The allegory of the spider's web does explain the real position of mankind, revealing the one he often tries to assume. It is also true that once man accepts that he is part of the brotherhood of all living beings, many problems become less serious. In reality, the situation is not nearly as simple, but it must be agreed that it was a great day for the rest of Earth's inhabitants when man remembered his duty to them and the land. Only one of many strands, man must work with the others to hold the web tight and firm. As the spider shows us, the web of life, the web of living things, will withstand the breeze while it is evenly woven. If it should become too loose and flawed, the wind will tear it apart. In the past two centuries, man has come perilously close to this tearing point. However, it seems that he is finally pulling his strand tighter and starting to mend the flaws. Some say he is retreating towards the views of his forefathers. In this case, he is moving in the right direction, for although his ancestors did not comprehend much that he does now, it is certain that they had a true understanding of the nature of Earth's greatest gift -- the web of life.

Schoolyard

Over singing birds and laughing children,
The sound of the class bell could be heard.
Ignoring the friendly chimes,
The children continued their games in the sun.
Knowing Mrs. Smith would soon appear
Calling them in for their afternoon lesson.

Hours after the children were home safely,
And darkness had fallen on the schoolyard.
Stomping of feet,
And the glare of the street lamps
Reflected off the chains,
Adorning leather jackets, filled the sky.

The illegal activity brought fear upon the young ones,
Not a voice was heard
As Tommy lit up and Jackie inhaled.
In the distance
Blue and red flashing lights could be seen.
Suddenly breaking the silence
Was the sound of sirens, closer and closer.

With no place to run,
And their hands
Tied behind their backs
With silver bracelets,
The young ones were Tried and found guilty
in the schoolyard.

Who Is the Loser?

Olim Lucia ambulabat per viam et ibat ad tabernam. Julius administrabat tabernam. Lucia quaerebat stolam et togam magnificam. Subito Julius conspexit puellam pulcherrimam et clamavit, "Parce!" Tamen Lucia Julium non videbat, quod erat occupata quaerendo stolam novam. Tum opportune Julius dixit, "Salve, puella magnifica! Ego te amo. Ibisne ad theatrum mecum?" Sed Lucia recusavit et vehementer dixit, "Uhh, tu me vexas. Tu es caudex miserandus. Quoque ego non sum sola. Ego habeo puerum fidelem. Deliciae meae est Claudius, ha ha!" Julius erat valde commotus et paene lacrimabat et vagivit, "O minime, minime! Ego te amo. Tu es dea." Sed Lucia dixit, "Non curo. Tu es insanus et stultus!" Et Lucia evanuit. Postea, amica Aurelia explicavit Luciae, "Julius est iuvenis valde, valde dives et dat multa dona pretiosa et habet multam pecuniam." Lucia exclamavit, "Minime! Ego sum stulta. Ego amo Julium, quod Claudius est pauper."

The Stairs of Time

The old woman stared out
Onto the ancient, yet restless sea.
The wrinkles imprinted in her face
Were an opening to the past; a key.
Her weakening eyes told a story.
Each blink of her eyelid
Brought her one step closer to her dream of glory,
Each day whispering to the sea a secret she still hid.
Season after season year after year
She came down to this lonely sea.
Puzzles she could not figure out as a child now became clear.
She tried to catch her breath, resting by an old familiar tree.
Each heavy, yet shallow breath,
Brought her higher and higher,
To the next step of life; Death.

Yesterday, Today

Yesterday fire, today electricity.
What has happened to this world of ours?
It is not the trees or the grass that has changed.
But the world itself.
Yesterday bow and arrow, today atomic bombs.
Why do we do this to ourselves?
We build weapons that hurt our Neighbors, but we are part of one family.
Yesterday Thanksgiving, today Thanksgiving also.
Why can't we be thankful instead of hurtful?
Peace is my dream, I hope it comes true.
Let's be thankful today and try harder tomorrow.

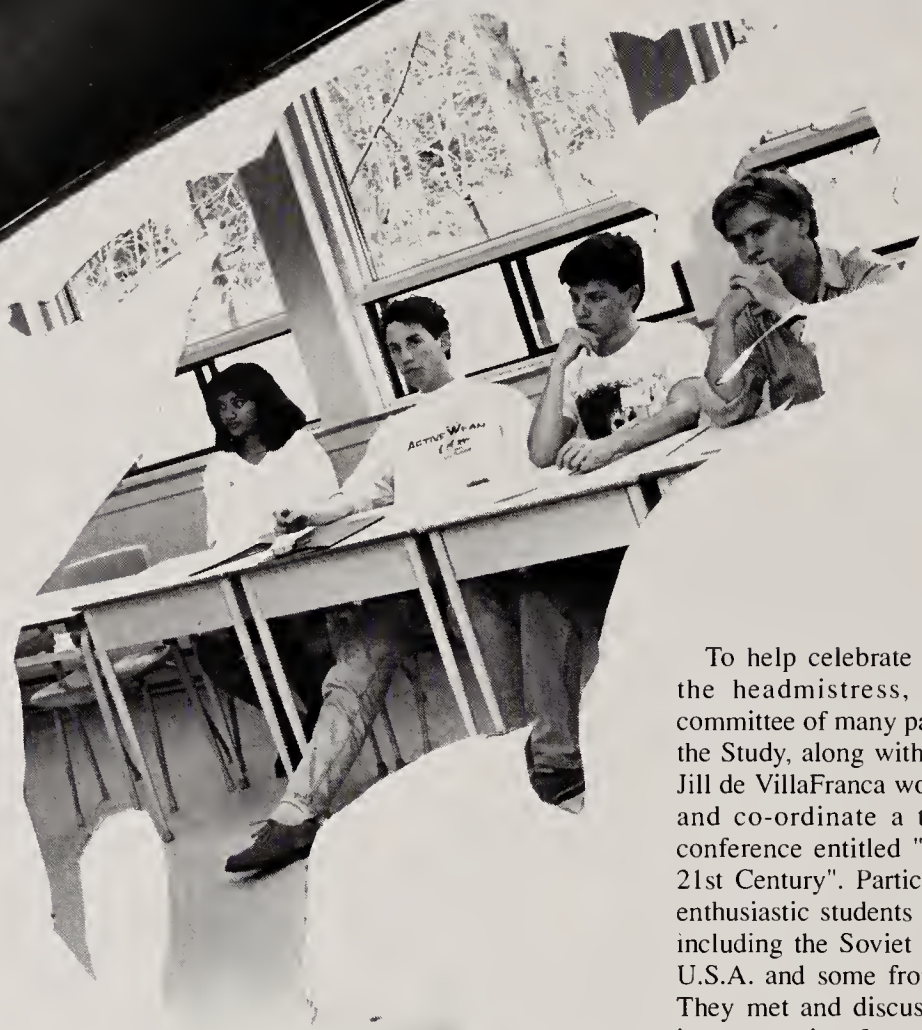
EVENTS



To help celebrate the Study's 75th anniversary, the headmistress, Mrs. Eve Marshall and a committee of many parents, teachers and students of the Study, along with the never-ending help of Ms. Jill de VillaFranca worked extremely hard to design and co-ordinate a two and a half day student conference entitled "Sharing the Challenge of the 21st Century". Participants in the conference were enthusiastic students from many parts of the world including the Soviet Union, West Germany, Japan, U.S.A. and some from other provinces of Canada. They met and discussed several important current issues ranging from the environment, energy and medicine to human rights, the future of communism and morality, with the generous aid of knowledgeable resource people.

In order to create a fun and sociable atmosphere for the young participants, several other events such as an international dinner, a tour of Old Montreal and Lachine Rapids, and a dinner dance were organized with the help of a few dedicated parents and teachers.

By the end, the Study girls made many friends, learned a great deal more about our vulnerable world and how each and every one can make a difference.

Many sincere thanks to all who participated and helped to bring about this wonderfully successful celebration of our school's birthday.

This year's drama production was a little different from the norm, but was still a lot of fun. As part of the school's 75th celebration, Ms. Biggs put together a play based on the theme of the modern actress' view of Shakespeare, entitled "Juliet (and Romeo)". Scenes were presented from ROMEO AND JULIET, AS YOU LIKE IT, THE TAMING OF THE SHREW, MACBETH, and THE MERCHANT OF VENICE. The four Shakespearean actresses were Paulina Flores, Natalie Molson, Jennifer Sterling and Mary Wood, each played various women of Shakespeare in different scenes. The play was told in the imagination of the two modern actresses, Carrie Haber and Jay-Jay Roboz. The whole story is held together by our mistress of ceremonies, Melina Nacos.

Special thanks must go to our Assistant Director, Sahra Dalfen and Assistant Producer, Caroline Guay for putting up with us, and of course to Ms. Biggs for being the best director, and the rest of the crew for pulling everything together so well. Good luck to next year's cast and crew, hope you have as much fun as we did.

Another successful year! Although the weather was not exactly the greatest, our track and field team pulled through. Making it to the championships, the competition was pretty tough. However, our team finished well and the 4 by 100 team of Ako Kyei-Aboagye, Janina Komaroff, Sarah Eaman and Jeana Park won the bronze medal. Excellent effort from the newcomers in secondary I and good luck to all the veterans next year. The Study Makes a Racket

Victory was sought after and savored on May 16 when the Study received the silver medal for their achievements in the GMAA tennis tournament. The Bantam team, which consisted of Claudine Molson, Justine Schnapp, Katherine Wener, Ani Gurunlian, Ingrid Cosio, and Christy Pacher played extremely well, and Christy managed to reach the quarterfinals. The Senior team, Lucy Opatrny, Jackie Wener, and the doubles teams, Ly-Na Toye and Melina Nacos and Emily Beckerleg and Pauline Hubert, displayed skill and mental toughness in all of their matches. Emily and Pauline received the bronze medal and Ly-Na and Melina achieved the gold. The tournament consisted of seventeen schools and The Study distinguished itself by its team spirit, coolness and unity.

Life seems sometimes like it is nothing but a puzzle, where the pieces are just impossible to fit together. This last year has shown, both around the world and within our school, how much of a reality the final finished picture is. We have seen walls come tumbling and curtains being drawn, but most of all we have seen the face of liberty and how beautiful its smile can be. The fall of communism in Eastern Europe and Nelson Mandela's release truly symbolize how our world is growing and changing to meet the needs of the future. We are now at the dawning of a new decade where global awareness is spreading about preserving the earth and our environment. The Study is undergoing its own perestroika as it prepares to move and expand; beginning a whole new generation of tradition. For seventy-five years this school has opened its doors to the best and the brightest and it opened them just a little wider this year with our much acclaimed conference. We indeed are sharing the challenge of the twenty-first century as we played nost to students from around the world including Germany and the Soviet Union. We, as humans, are each representative of a piece in the jigsaw puzzle of life. Each one of us is capable of making a difference, as we all contribute to the end masterpiece. Sometimes we all go through times in our lives where the pieces just do not seem to ever connect, but it is important to know that someday we will all find our perfect fit. In the meantime all we can do is pursue our goals and dreams in the hope of succeeding in all our endeavors, but never forgetting that all of us are part of a bigger picture. I stand right now on the threshold of my life and at the peak of my youth and I pray with all my heart that when I look back at these words I remember their significance and the vital message I was trying to convey.

A Tradition of Excellence

Howarth has been clothiers to leading Canadians for 60 years. Our three stores in Toronto, Montreal and Ottawa have built a tradition of serving Canadian families from the time they enter the best schools until well after they take their seats in the boardrooms of the nation.

to the class of '90

it is the ending of the year,
we wave goodbye with lots of tears.
crying faces we can see,
but it must be...
we sit and watch as years go by.

our riches can't buy everything,
we want to hear the children sing.
all we hear is the sound of rain falling on the ground...
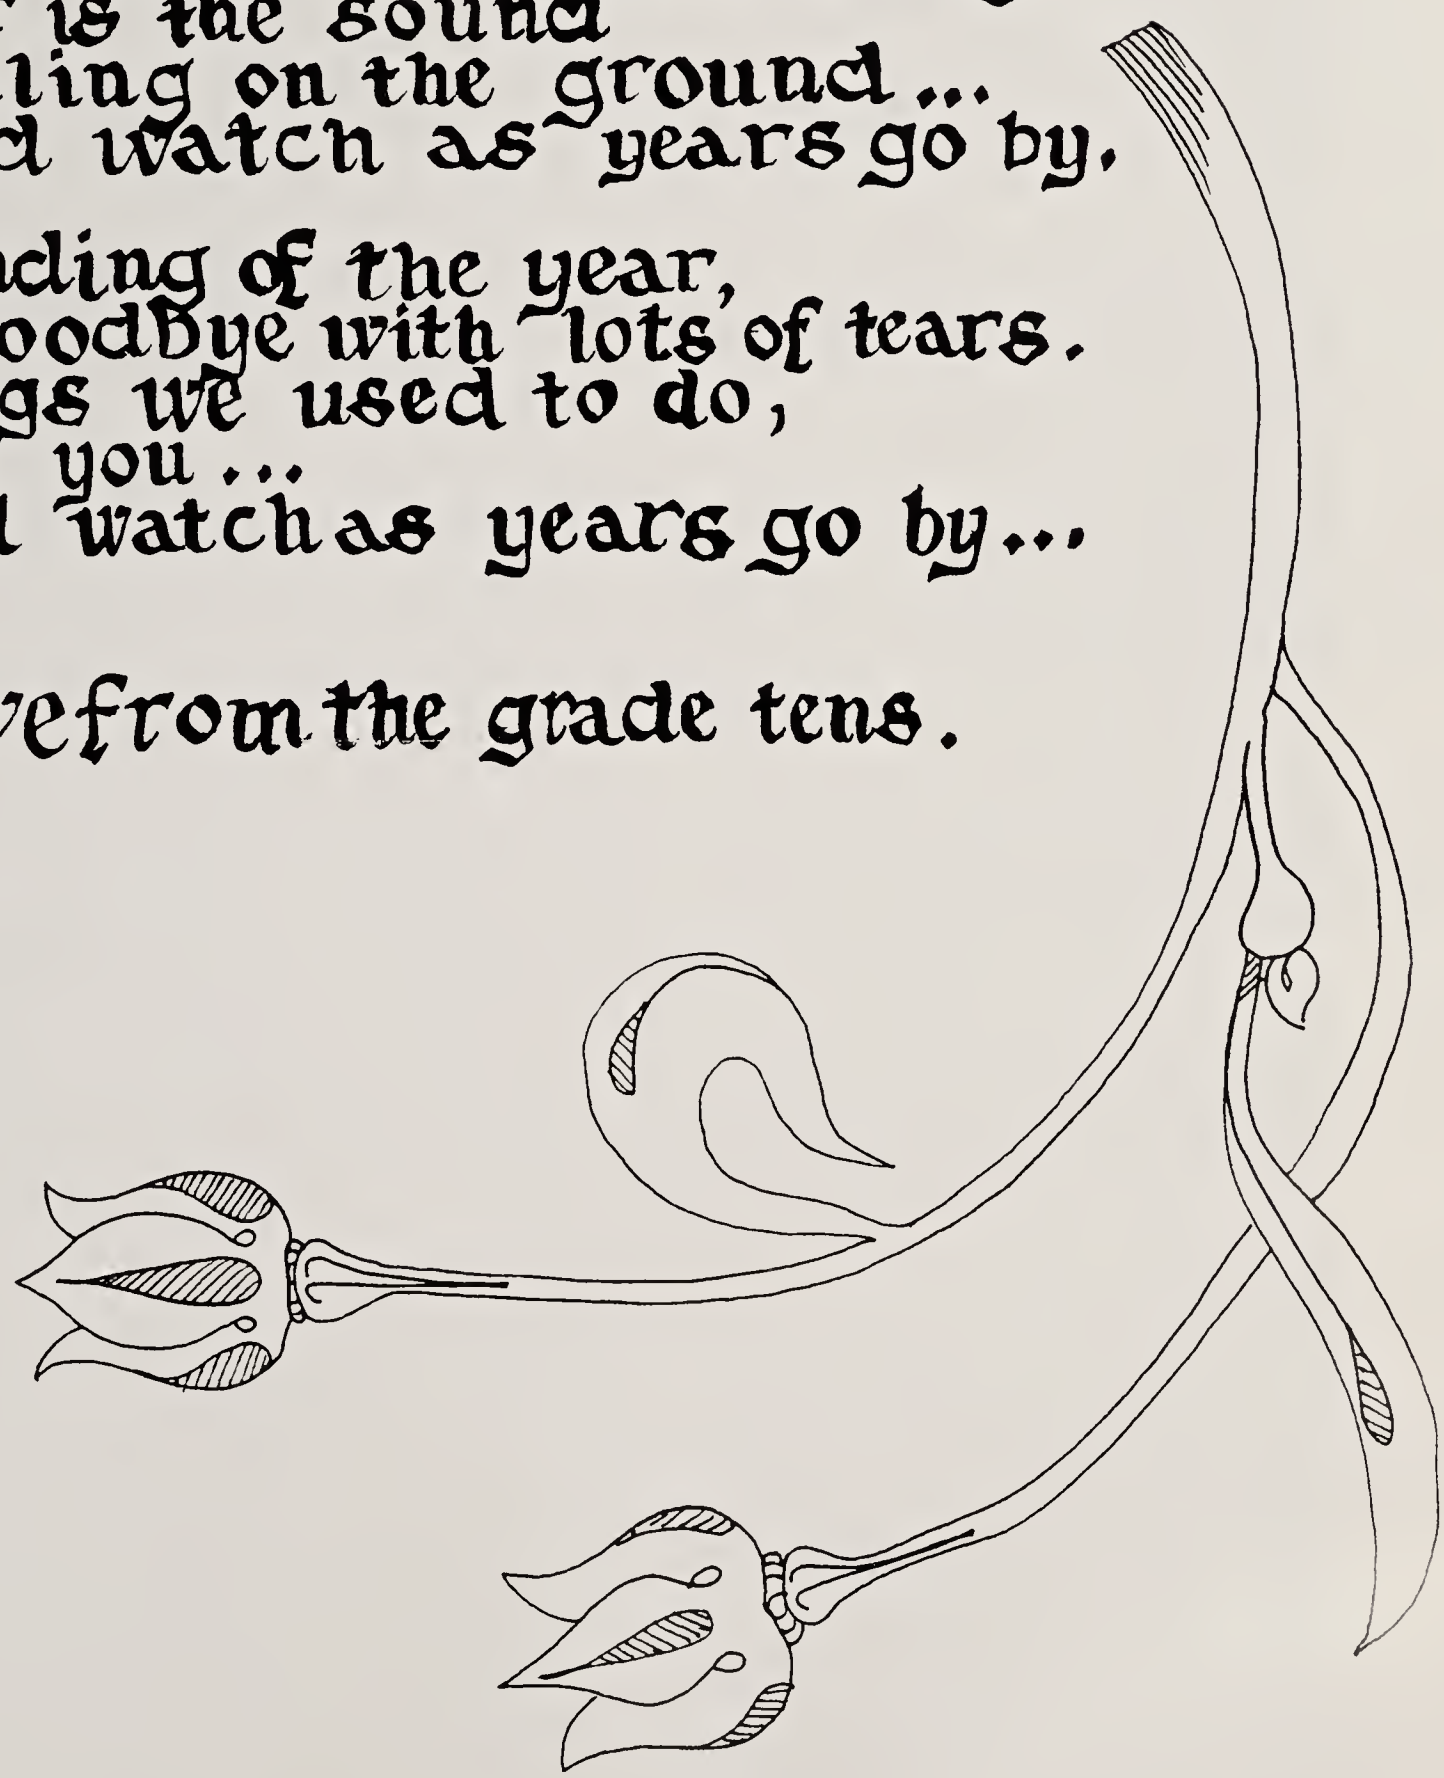
we sit and watch as years go by.

it is the ending of the year,
we wave goodbye with lots of tears.
doing things we used to do,
we think of you...
we sit and watch as years go by...

lovefrom the grade tens.



"We are so excited" - to the tune of "We didn't start the fire"

Out of time, lack of sleep
Lots of work, plans to keep
Study Conference, Mrs. Marshall
75th Birthday
People coming soon and fast
Can't wait, what a blast
Dances, lectures, fun and games
Always on the move
Uniforms, blue and white
Penny loafers, ties and tights
Graduation, limousine
Last year as a team
CEGEP next year
Oh, shall I shed a tear
Study friends, saying good-bye
Guaranteed that we'll all cry!
CHORUS: We're so excited
'Cuz we're graduating and we're celebrating
We're so excited
'Cuz our school is moving
And of course improving

Junior School. middle too
We are leaving, how about you?
Marianapolis, Dawson, Vanier + Brebeuf
United States, Canada, Europe + Asia
Where to go, I don't know
Hope you all enjoy our show
History papers, precis
Essays, going crazy
Transcripts, Exams
Applications, must cram
Almost there, gotta care
Mrs. Wroe cut off her hair
Get a dress and some duds
Boutonnieres, my date's a stud
Lots of fun, my date and I
He'll be there in tux and tie
Summer camp, pack your trunk
Better hope that you don't flunk
Don't panic, you'll do fine
Just remember watch your time!

LOVE THE GRADE ELEVENS

Here's to Another 75 Years!
